"After working carefully, quietly for many years as a textile and graphic designer in Paris, New York and Sydney, I found that noisy plate breaking is my passion. Now everyday I break and cut old plates, unglazed ceramics, shiny glass tiles, stone & marble, Venetian smalti, Mexican gold and silver mirrors. Then I glue all the fragments together to create original mosaic pieces of all kinds and shapes... and I love it."

Commission work to your own vision and need inspired by your home environment.

A mosaicked feature wall can be a stunning addition to your environment. When you are renovating your house, personalize the front of your bathtub, kitchen splashback or garden wall.

Give a second chance to some neglected objects, some chipped beloved plates, transforming them into some beautiful 3D-artwork again. A rusty disused piece of furniture can be offered a new life with a freshly mosaic top.

Price is dependant upon size, materials complexity of design and installation.

Living in France for 30 years, the colours, textures and rhythms of the Mediterranean region shaped Sophie and her work. When she moved to Australia, 15 years ago, the dry, wide-open spaces and the tropical rainforests added many layers of richness to her designs.

Sophie's influences are drawn from her past working experience as an illustrator, graphic designer and textile designer. "Often when I'm placing each small piece of glass next to another, I'm reminded of my embroidery making".

Her progression from using photos and prints of all kinds to make collages, and substituting paper for ceramics was natural.

These days, Sophie finds most of her materials in opshops, rubbish tips and recycling centres around the city and countryside. She salvages disused objects including second-hand ceramics which inspire her reusing them in her own mosaic creations.
